The Ocean Acidification Research for Sustainability Programme (OARS) programme is an endorsed programme of the UN Decade of Ocean Science, created in support of Sustainable Development Goal Target 14.3.

In order to encourage a diversity of ocean acidification actions, OARS has developed a framework for identifying useful information and co-designing ocean acidification projects that meet different decision-making needs.

This is an open event for all conference participants, specifically if you're a climate or ocean policymaker, fisheries manager, communications professional, scientist, community leader or anyone else who wants to learn more about Science to Action for UN SDG 14.3.
